UH BOOKSTORE PREPARES FOR SPRING SEMESTER

Houston, January 15, 2009 – On Tuesday, January 20, the University of Houston will open its doors for the Spring 2009 semester. The University Center will be bustling with activity as students rush to purchase their textbooks and school supplies.

In preparation for the start of the semester rush, the UH Bookstore has readied itself with 80 temporary student employees, 22 cash registers for purchases and four registers for refunds and returns. Some registers will be designated for special check-out services to assist students with scholarships checks and financial aid that will help other customers move through the lines more quickly.

For those students who might have missed selling their textbooks during the main buyback at the end of the Fall semester, the UH Bookstore will have a last minute book buyback during the first two days of class. They will also add an on-line station inside the store that will be used as a pick-up and information center for all on-line orders.

As a special treat, UH Bookstore staff will be handing out free samples of new products like hair gels and shaving gels as students leave the store.

“The textbook department is ready, books are shelved, students are trained and ready to deliver exceptional service to the campus,” said Felix Robison, UH Bookstore Manager. “We want our students and campus community to have a great shopping experience whenever they visit our store.”

The UH Bookstore, located on the first floor of the University Center, will offer extended hours during the first week of school.
