

Shasta sightings on campus

As you know, the “Cougar Pride” here at the University of Houston is amazing. Simply walk across campus on a Friday morning and you will notice that the vast majority of staff, faculty and students are showing their cougar pride by wearing red.

One thing that you may not have noticed are the numerous variations on the UH Mascot - Shasta. One day last week I decided to skip my lunch and go out in search of Shasta. It was amazing how many variations of Shasta there are on campus. In just one hour I was able to gather 14 different Shasta images throughout the UH Campus.

These 14 pictures of Shasta are currently placed throughout the HR Communications Pages: <http://www.uh.edu/hr-communications/>. The majority of the pictures are photographs of artworks on display in departments or public areas.

How many of the 14 Shasta’s have you seen? Can you identify the location of all 14?

I am sure there are many additional Shasta artworks on campus that I did not find during my 1 hour tour, so if you know of any that are not shown please forward the information to Cody Pelletier at cpelletier@uh.edu, so we can add them to our Shasta photo gallery.

Additional pictures, including the location for both current and new images will be published shortly as part of a “Shasta Walking Tour”.
