Houston Medication Safety Symposium

High Risk Medications and Prescription Abuse

FRIDAY, APRIL 28, 2017

The Denton A. Cooley, MD & Ralph C. Cooley, DDS University Life Center Houston, TX
Welcome to the Houston Medication Safety Symposium!

We are excited to launch an annual symposium to highlight current challenges in providing safe and effective medication therapy. The Houston Medication Safety Symposium will be the first of many to highlight challenges encountered in optimizing medication use, challenges that continue to increase as the population ages and are exposed to polypharmacy, and as we develop a fuller understanding of the risks and benefits of medication therapy. We have chosen to highlight two critical areas in drug therapy in this symposium: high risk medication use and the opioid epidemic.

We hope that this event will provide information on the latest research and challenges in medication therapy for older patients, with a focus on potentially inappropriate medications and medication adherence. At the same time, the opioid epidemic presents an enormous challenge to clinicians, patients, family members, policy makers, and to society at large.

Thank you for joining us. We hope that the presentations stimulate your thinking, change your clinical practice, and influence your research. We hope to generate conversations about medication safety that continue long after the symposium. We look forward to your feedback and we hope to see you again next year!

With warmest regards,

Is this medication inappropriate for older adults? Criteria, challenges, and conundrums

Dr. Steinman is a Professor of Medicine in the UCSF Division of Geriatrics and a national leader in identifying and improving the quality of medication prescribing in clinically complex older adults. He devotes most of his time to research, while also maintaining an active clinical practice in the geriatrics clinic and inpatient general medicine service at the San Francisco VA Medical Center. Dr. Steinman’s research program focuses on improving how doctors prescribe medications for older adults, and is supported by grants from the National Institutes of Health and other funders. His research interests also include pharmaceutical industry marketing and the impacts of marketing on physicians and trainees. Dr. Steinman is Co-Director for Research, Director of Research Training, and T32 research fellowship director for the UCSF Division of Geriatrics, and is leader of the Data, Measures, and Accrual Core for the UCSF Pepper Center for Aging Research. He also has leadership roles with several national organizations, including service as co-chair of the American Geriatrics Society Beers Criteria guideline panel.

Zachary Marcum, PharmD, PhD

Improving Medication Adherence in Older Adults: Keep Your Eyes on the Prize

Dr. Marcum is an Assistant Professor at the University of Washington, School of Pharmacy and serves as Assistant Director for Research at the Plein Center for Geriatric Pharmacy Research, Education, and Outreach. In his research, he uses geriatric pharmacoepidemiology and health services research methods, with the overall goal of improving the safe use of medications in older adults in order to improve health outcomes. He is a clinical investigator on federally funded research grants, including an AHRQ Patient-Centered Outcomes Research K12 program. Previously, he completed a two-year fellowship in geriatric pharmacotherapy research at the University of Pittsburgh and a PGY1 pharmacy practice residency at the Indianapolis VA Medical Center, and he received his PhD in Clinical & Translational Science from the University of Pittsburgh, School of Medicine.
Dr. Grant Baldwin is the Director of the Division of Unintentional Injury Prevention at the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control in the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. He has served in this capacity since 2008. Dr. Baldwin has helped raise the profile of motor vehicle injury prevention and scaled up CDC’s response to the prescription drug overdose epidemic. He has also advanced the work in older adult fall prevention and CDC’s efforts traumatic brain injury prevention. He has been at CDC for over 20 years. Dr. Baldwin received his PhD in Health Behavior and Health Education at the University of Michigan. He received a MPH in Behavioral Sciences and Health Education from Emory University, and is currently an affiliated professor at Emory University. Dr. Baldwin has given keynote addresses or provided remarks at over 60 state, national and international conferences and meetings, has authored or coauthored more than 40 peer-reviewed publications, and has received awards of excellence for his leadership and teaching.

After a 25 year academic and clinical career at Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center, University of Kentucky and Vanderbilt University, Dr. Passik spent the past 4 years in the toxicology and most recently the pharmaceutical industry. His research has focused on psychiatric aspects of cancer and non-cancer pain and symptom management and the interface of pain management and addiction. He has served as editor and reviewer for multiple journals in pain and psycho-oncology. He has authored over 200 scholarly publications.
