Call 3-0919 for a copy of "Guidelines for Requesting and Evaluating Core Courses" or visit the website at www.uh.edu/academics/corecurriculum

A. How does the proposed course meet the appropriate Exemplary Educational Objectives? The objective of the humanities in a Latino-inflected core curriculum is to expand students' knowledge of Latinos in relation to human groups and cultures, especially in relation to behaviors, ideas, and values expressed in works of Latino imagination, art and thought. Through study of Latino literature, students will engage in critical analysis, form aesthetic judgments, and develop an appreciation of the arts and humanities as fundamental to the health and survival of any society. Specific goals include the following

1. To demonstrate awareness of the scope and variety of works of Latino literature, art and humanities.
2. To understand those works as expressions of individual and group values within an historical and social context.
3. To respond critically to Latino works in the arts and humanities.
4. To articulate an informed personal reaction to Latino and other works in the arts and humanities.
5. To develop an appreciation for the aesthetic principles that guide or govern Latino literature.
6. To demonstrate knowledge of the influence of Latino literature, thought and/or the arts on intercultural experiences.
7. To achieve a solid introduction to understanding of the overall field, and to produce written work of quality corresponding to the level of the course involved.

Specify the processes and procedures for evaluating course effectiveness in regard to its goals.

Students will receive guidance in analyzing literary texts in relation to social contexts, as well as in the relations between Latino literature and Latin American, U.S. minority and broader world contexts. They will participate in the comparative analysis of texts and the evaluation of analyses by their peers and professionals, so they develop criteria for considering their own work. They will be asked to produce drafts and help evaluate each other's work in the light of the overall field and its context, this leading to their final draft paper. The final class project will indicate their level of preparedness for more advanced work in this field.

Evaluation of Students:
- Attendance and Participation: 10%
- Leading discussions (2) 20%
- 6 300-500 word Reflections/Analyses (5%): 30%
- Proposal and presentation of final paper 10%
- Final paper (10-15 pp.) 30%

Student Evaluation of Course:
Students will be given a questionnaire about course midway in the semester and at semester's end. The questionnaire will raise questions about reading assignments, requirements, classroom procedures, etc. Students will also evaluate the course at the end of the semester using the standard evaluation form.

C. Delinate how these evaluation results will be used to improve the course.
On the basis of the midterm student evaluation of the course, the professor may consider possible adjustments in the syllabus before semester's end. No syllabus change can raise the requirements or level of difficulty for the course, or make it less likely for the student to succeed. The final standard evaluation will be used for rethinking the course for the next time it is given.
Course Description:
Works of U.S. Puerto Rican, Cuban, Dominican, Central and South American Latino literatures (fiction, poetry, drama, etc.) related to Chicano and Latin American literature and their theoretical frames. In English.

This is a core Humanities course. It also counts as credit toward minors in World Cultures and Literatures, as well as in Latin American Studies. It will also count toward credit in English and Mexican American studies, complementing existing courses in Mexican American and African American literatures.
