Preface

This e-Workbook is intended to supplement the exercises found in Techniques and Materials of Music, 7th ed. Instructors will find these exercises useful in several ways:

- Intensive study of particular topics
- Extra work for students having difficulty with selected topics
- Remediation, particularly for transfer students
- As a source of exercises for quizzes and tests

There are four types of exercises:

- Preliminary exercises. These exercises are the most mechanical and are focused on the basics of part writing.
- Melodies for harmonization.
- Figured and unfigured basses.
- Compositional exercises. These exercises establish a particular texture for the completion of the harmonization, or, in some instances, the composition of one to two phrases in the style of the given measures.

Exercises are graded and cumulative and are intended to incorporate all the harmonic vocabulary introduced to that point.

All exercises are presented with the necessary blank staves. In the early units, choral voicing or keyboard voicing is specified; in later units the student or instructor is given the choice of voicing. For the sake of simplicity, all the basic part-writing exercises have been notated with stems up in the soprano and stems down in the bass. If an exercise is realized in keyboard voicing the student will need to adjust the stem directions to reflect common notational practice.

The textural exercises are thoroughly edited. When doing these exercises it is important that the student approach them as if writing “real” music. Attention must be paid to continuing the articulations as in the given measures. The student may wish to add additional dynamic markings such as crescendos and diminuendos to support the shape of the music.
Suggestions for the Student

Before doing these exercises, it will be important to study with care the matching explanatory pages in Techniques and Materials of Music, and the corresponding examples found in Music for Analysis (6th edition, Oxford University Press).

In each exercise, carefully analyze the given material in terms of its harmonic and melodic content as well as all aspects of patterning, so that your work is logical and consistent in terms of the given. If the exercise involves harmonizing a melody, analyze (or perhaps discuss in class) the implied harmonic rhythm and the harmonic and cadential implications of the given line; if an unfigured bass, analyze and discuss the harmonic implications of each note in the bass, paying close attention to typical bass-line scale-degree idioms; if a texture/stylistic exercise, pay close attention to all aspects of patterning and style in the given. Hearing and analyzing similar examples from Music for Analysis will be especially helpful with these more compositional/stylistic exercises.

It is important in all your writing both to analyze and understand the choices you are making, and to produce a result that is pleasing and musical to the ear.

For the exercises in Part III: Where there is chromaticism, be sure you understand the harmonic implications of each altered scale-degree before starting to work out the exercise. Which notes might be non-harmonic tones? Which imply secondary dominants or other chromatic vocabulary? What is the implied harmonic rhythm? What patterns of chromaticism can you find?

For the exercises in Part IV, it is especially important that you study the relevant chapters from Techniques and Materials of Music, and analyze examples from Music for Analysis before you undertake the writing of the exercises, as they cannot be well done without a good deal of knowledge of both technique and style. Analyze with care the given materials in each exercise in terms of all the musical aspects: scale or pitch collection, harmonic vocabulary, rhythmic organization and all aspects of patterning. Your result should as closely as possible match the sound of the given material.
