Monday

Opening Dialogues across Race, Region, and Religion – Then and Now 4:00 PM - 6:00 PM

Honors College Commons

Wednesdays in Mississippi, the only civil rights project organized by women for women during Freedom Summer, brought interracial, interfaith teams of proper northern ladies to the South to bridge differences—consciously using their gender, age, and class to succeed where others failed. The panel discusses how it worked then and how the model can be used today.
