

History 4373 Researching Mexican History
Fall 2013 Professor Kellogg
MW 1-2:30

This course is a capstone course for undergraduates majoring in History and can meet an upper-division requirement in the minor in Latin American Studies as well. It is designed to introduce you to the process of doing historical research. Because the web has become such a major force in historical research, we will talk about both traditional and digital research techniques. During the semester we will emphasize the skills and techniques used in historical research, and we will study and use those skills in relation to a particular context, the dramatic history of the nation of Mexico, from the prehispanic period through conquest to the present.
