

Cuba Online: The challenge of Knowing/Telling in an "offline" country

Aside from the recent approach to internet accessibility by the Cubans, issues regarding connectivity in Cuba are still complex and expensive. Faithful to a tradition that has allowed them to reinvent across decades, alternative networks arise for the distribution of content and information, as well as other ways of knowledge of what revolves their reality.

Xenia Reloba de la Cruz (Cuba, 1972) is licensed in Journalism by the University of La Habana in 1994. With more than two decades of experience in cultural journalism, she reviews "Casa de las Americas" a magazine of literature and thought, and "Nuevo Cine Latinoamericano". In collaboration with her colleagues, Karen Dubinsky (Canada) and Maria Caridad Cumaná (Cuba), she is one of the compilers of the book "Habáname: la ciudad musical de Carlos Varela", edited in La Habana and Toronto.

October 22nd, 5:30 pm 304 AH