

Financial Literacy in Higher Education

DSAES*PRACTICE has put together a catalog of digital resources around financial literacy in higher education. We hope that it can shed light on the importance of financial literacy. We hope it also inspires our fellow UH staff members to educate themselves and become more financially literate to not only benefit them personally, but to better service our student population as well.

About Financial Literacy in Higher Education

“With the rise of student loan debt in America and the continuous need for first-generation, low-income, and middle class families to find additional sources to help pay for college, there is an opportunity for high schools and colleges to step up and help educate their students on preparing financially for higher education costs. Basic personal finance skills like budgeting, savings, building and maintaining credit, and investing should be taught to all individuals, especially those in high school and college. This [podcast] will show the need to provide financial literacy in all [...] higher education institutions to establish a foundation for future financial success.” – Jacqueline Walker

Digital Media Resources:

“How America Pays for College 2019” \(Sallie Mae & Ipsos\)

“Why Financial Literacy in Higher Education Is A Top Future-Ready Skill” – Rod Berger \(Forbes\)

“College Planning Essentials” \(J.P.Morgan Asset Management\)

Podcast Resources:

Financial Literacy in Higher Education – DSAESPRACTICE

University Resources:

UH Financial Literacy Counselor - Jacqueline Walker \(Open to both Staff & Students\)

Email: FinancialLiteracy@uh.edu

Money Matters Institute Application – Become a Money Mentor!