

JUST BABIES

PAUL BLOOM

Babies possess a rich moral sense, but this moral sense is narrow. Many principles that are central to adult morality are the product of our intelligence and our imagination; they are not in our genes. And some of our natural moral intuitions have perverse consequences—we would be better off without them. Nature vs. Nurture. JUST BABIES: THE ORIGINS OF GOOD AND EVIL.

FRIDAY, FEB 7 • 4 PM • HONORS COMMONS

