Lisa Kan, PhD

Email: kan@shsu.edu

Lisa Kan, PhD, is a Research Director at the Harris County Community Supervision & Corrections Department, the third largest probation department in the country. She earned her doctorate in Clinical Psychology from Sam Houston State University, and is a licensed psychologist in Texas and Virginia. She has worked with justice-involved individuals in both research and clinical contexts, across various settings and jurisdictions.

Prior to her current position, Dr. Kan was a tenure-track assistant professor at her alma mater, where she taught undergraduate and graduate students, mentored student research, and supervised psychology trainees in evidence-based evaluations and interventions. She also worked at The Harris Center for Mental Health and IDD as an analyst, where she gained a systems perspective of the intersections of community health and judicial systems.
