The Human Nutrition and Foods (HNFDS) program is requesting a name change for the Non-ADA degree track. HNFDS currently has both an accredited and non-accredited degree track: Bachelor of Science Human Nutrition and Foods and Bachelor of Science Human Nutrition and Foods (Non-ADA). The Non-ADA designation distinguishes this track from the degree track that is accredited for Dietetics education by the Commission on Accreditation for Dietetic Education (CADE). Non-ADA refers to the American Dietetic Association (ADA), the professional organization for Registered Dietitians. This designation is erroneous in its identification of ADA as the accreditation body and is confusing for students. HNFDS is proposing a name change of the Non-ADA track to Bachelor of Science Nutritional Sciences.

The proposed degree track name change will accomplish two goals:

1. To more accurately reflect the degree content and intent
2. To reduce student confusion
