Syllabus

List the student learning outcomes for the course (Statements of what students will know and be able to do as a result of taking this course. See appended hints for constructing these statements):

Students will have an understanding of the study of religion as an interdisciplinary academic field.

Students will develop understanding of the diversity of Hindu practices and beliefs through ethnographic study.

Students will further their understanding of the religion by focusing further writing on critical analysis of the sacred texts and historical analysis.

Writing produced throughout the course will be developed through an instructor and university writing resource services, including feedback processes, discussion of conceptualization, organization, opportunity for draft revisions and editing, and presentation of writing via class group and/or instructor discussion.

Component Area for which the course is being proposed (check one):

Communication

American History

Mathematics

Government/Political

Science

Language, Philosophy, & Culture

Social & Behavioral Science

Creative Arts

WID X Component Area Option

Life & Physical Sciences

Competency areas addressed by the course (refer to appended chart for competencies that are required and optional in each component area):

Critical Thinking

Communication Skills

Empirical & Quantitative Skills

Teamwork

Social Responsibility

Personal Responsibility

Because we will be assessing student learning outcomes across multiple core courses, assessments assigned in your course must include assessments of the core competencies. For each competency checked above, indicated the specific course assignment(s) which, when completed by students, will provide evidence of the competency. Provide detailed information, such as copies of the paper or project assignment, copies of individual test items, etc. A single assignment may be used to provide data for multiple competencies.

Critical Thinking:

Because this course will be a WID core course, writing assignments are the primary mode of developing critical skills in cross-cultural understanding, and knowledge of the Hindu culture and its worldwide practice. Writing assignments are designed to develop organizational and analytical skills. Emphasis in writing assignments will be placed on 1) introducing the subject matter and the logic of the argument that the student proposes to follow; 2) progressing from paragraph to paragraph with steps in the argument that are related in sequential structures; 3) drawing conclusions based on the argument that the student has constructed.

The writing assignment described in Weeks 7 (Brainstorming and Drafting) and 8 (Comparative Religions paper) are representative of the WID emphasis of this course. The PROCESS of writing, and its communal dimensions are emphasized, as they must be in any and all WID courses. Student mastery of the PROCESS of writing means that their products will be better because they are more confident of the HOW, as well as the WHAT, of writing. They will be less likely to procrastinate, and more likely to find that the PROCESS actually aids and strengthens their ability to think critically.

Communication Skills:

Students will discuss writing assignments in small groups, exchange drafts of papers, read each other's drafts, and provide written responses to each other's drafts. This process makes students aware that communication in writing depends upon dialogue with readers (in this case the student's peers, as well as the professor.) The finished papers will be assessed for clarity of expression, logical organization, and analytic insights into the material addressed in the essay. Each paper assignment asks students to develop their knowledge of Hinduism worldwide.

Empirical & Quantitative Skills:

Teamwork:

Social Responsibility:

Written and oral communication exercises instill a sense of respect for the reader or interlocutor, and hone skills whereby students exchange views and explore a culture very different from what most students know, namely Hindu culture worldwide.

Personal Responsibility:

The study of Hinduism teaches the tenets of this religion, including individual responsibility to the community. This study requires students to think comparatively about their own commitment to their communities. Beyond the subject matter, group work on writing assignments will require personal commitment to the group in the form of dialogue about the topic at hand and written commentary on others' drafts.

Will the syllabus vary across multiple section of the course? Yes No

If yes, list the assignments that will be constant across sections:

Inclusion in the core is contingent upon the course being offered and taught at least once every other academic year. Courses will be reviewed for renewal every 5 years.

The department understands that instructors will be expected to provide student work and to participate in university-wide assessments of student work. This could include, but may not be limited to, designing instruments such as rubrics, and scoring work by students in this or other courses. In addition, instructors of core courses may be asked to include brief assessment activities in their course.

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course examines the diversity of Hindu practices established outside of India and compares Hindu practices and beliefs established in different places around the world, including here in Houston, Texas. We will read about colonial and post-colonial migration from India in order to contextualize and compare Hindu traditions in the Pacific, East Africa, the West Indies, Europe and North America. Paradigms and theories in religious studies, anthropology and sociology will be introduced in order to think about how communities and religious practices are shaped by local and global cultures. In addition to library research, students will gather their own data through fieldwork, specifically temple visits and interviews, to write a final paper.

FORMAT (HYBRID):

This course will be offered primarily online through Blackboard, but students will also be required to meet in person four times during the semester.

Learning Outcomes

1. Students will have an understanding of the study of religion as an interdisciplinary academic field.
2. Students will develop understanding of the diversity of Hindu practices and beliefs through ethnographic study.
3. Students will further their understanding of the religions by focusing further writing on critical analysis of the sacred texts and historical analysis.
4. Writing produced throughout the course will be developed through an instructor and university writing resource services feedback process involving discussion of invention, assistance with organization, opportunity for draft revisions and editing, and finally presentation of writings via class group and/or instructor discussion.

WRITING INTENSIVE EXPERIENCES IN THE DISCIPLINES:

This is writing-intensive content course which fulfills a CORE requirement for a Writing in the Disciplines course (WID) and it can be counted towards minor requirements. As such, its educational objectives include:

- Read published articles informed by anthropology and religious studies in order to gain knowledge of discipline specific debates and ways of writing.
- Demonstrate through your writing familiarity with key concepts and arguments developed by anthropologists and scholars of religion and use them to develop your own analyses and arguments through complex reasoning and critical thinking.
- Develop writing skills specific to anthropology and religious studies by working through all stages of the writing process including: invention, organization, drafting, revision, editing, and presentation.
- Prepare a research paper with documentation in accordance with disciplinary standards.
- Clearly communicate your ideas in writing with organization and technical proficiency.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

- Attendance: You are expected to attend four face-to-face class sessions. Two will be held on-campus and two will be off-campus temple visits.
- Participation/ Informal Writing: Post your thoughts and reflections weekly on reading and films through the online discussion board. You will be required to make one post before reading your classmates' comments and a second post in response to what others have written. Thoughtful posts will make it a more enriching discussion experience for everyone involved. A portion of your grade is based on word count and quality of this informal writing (75-100 words per post, min. 1125 for the semester).
- Quizzes: Each week you will take an open-book quiz based on the content of assigned reading or films.
- Research: Inform your ideas and enhance your formal writing by finding and citing published anthropological and religious studies articles. Gather primary data by learning how to conduct an interview and then interview a Houston-based Hindu. Practice using primary evidence in your writing by incorporating what you learned from your interview into your final research paper.
